Rule of Law

The Rule of Law, in its most basic form, is the principle that no one is above the law. The rule follows logically from the idea that truth, and therefore law, is based upon fundamental principles which can be discovered, but which cannot be created through an act of will. The most important application of the rule of law is the principle that governmental authority is legitimately exercised only in accordance with written, publicly disclosed laws adopted and enforced in accordance with established procedural steps that are referred to as due process. The principle is intended to be a safeguard against arbitrary governance, whether by a totalitarian leader or by mob rule. Thus, the rule of law is hostile both to dictatorship and to anarchy.

Advancing the Rule of Law Is Our Purpose as a Business:

LexisNexis® is committed to advancing the Rule of Law both through our day-to-day business, and our actions as a corporate citizen. We believe that the rule of law is essential to political stability, economic opportunity, social progress and fundamental fairness and equality.

We work to advance the rule of law in four key areas:

- I. We provide products and services that enable our customers to excel in the practice and business of law.
- II. We document laws and make them accessible to citizens and professionals.
- III. We partner with governments and non-profits to make justice systems more efficient and transparent.
- IV. We support corporate citizenship initiatives that strengthen civil society and the Rule of Law globally.

We are proud to feature the inaugural LexisNexis Rule of Law Debate as a platform to stimulate discussion and engender action in the region towards upholding human rights and advancing the rule of law.

The LexisNexis Rule of Law Debate 2013

The ASEAN Declaration of Human Rights, which came into being in 2012, lays out universal human rights principles as a guideline in the governing of Southeast Asian regions. As pronounced in the preamble of the declaration, its main aim is to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as the principles of democracy, rule of law and good governance.

Whilst many have hailed the instrument as a huge step towards the promotion and protection of human rights in the region, many also question the quality of its universality due to its cultural relativistic deference to "Asian" values. The debate aims to create awareness about the ASEAN Declaration of Human Rights, stimulate discussions on its benefits and challenges and broaden the whirlwind of discussion on human rights issues today.

The event will bring together partners, customers and friends of LexisNexis in an intimate setting, enabling meaningful discussions on the topic. The aim is to create new partnerships, initiatives and projects which will further advance the rule of law in the region.

"Human Rights in ASEAN: Past, Present and Future"

2.50PM

Lim Chee Wee is the President of the Malaysian Bar, and partner in the Dispute Resolution Division of SKRINE.

He graduated from the University of New South Wales, Australia with a LLB degree and B. Comm. (Accounting) degree, and was admitted to the Malaysian Bar in 1993. He started practising in SKRINE and was made a partner of SKRINE in January 2001.

Lim Chee Wee has a broad commercial practice with experience in a wide variety of commercial and corporate disputes and litigation. He was rated by international directories such as Legal 500 and Asialaw Profiles 2011, and was listed in Chambers Asia 2010 as a leading individual for Dispute Resolution.

Under his leadership, the Malaysian Bar was presented the United Nations (Malaysia) Award 2012, recognising the Malaysian Bar's contributions towards advancing the cause of democracy and human rights in Malaysia.

The Panel Forum:

"Do we need an ASEAN Court of Human Rights?"

3.00PM

The Panellists:

Edmund Bon is a partner in the Criminal Law and Public Interest Litigation Department of Chooi & Co. and specialises in criminal defence, constitutional and administrative law, and public interest litigation. Edmund read law at University College London and was called to the English Bar (Lincoln's Inn) in 1997. Edmund is a Chevening scholar and has a Masters degree in International Human Rights Law from Oxford University.

Edmund was previously an elected member of the Malaysian Bar Council and chaired the Constitutional Law (2009-2011), Human Rights (2007-2009) and National Young Lawyers' (2006-2008) committees. He continues to be involved in various social movements and enterprises having co-founded the Malaysian Centre for Constitutionalism & Human Rights (MCCHR also known as PusatRakyatLB). Edmund's latest publication is the Halsbury's Laws of Malaysia on "Citizenship, Immigration, National Security and the Police" (Volume 27, 2010).

Faisal Moideen is a member of the Malaysian Bar and the Managing Partner of Messrs Moideen & Max, a law firm based in Kuala Lumpur. He was previously attached to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees as Protection Assistant. In his university days, Faisal was a champion debater for UT Mara.

Although his views in respect of rights and freedoms are largely unorthodox and unconventional, he believes that rights and freedoms are crucial components of societal development."

Moderator:

Syahredzan Johan is a partner at Messrs. RamRais & Partners.

In 2009, Syahredzan was appointed as the Co-deputy Chairperson of the Bar Council's Constitutional Law Committee, the committee behind the successful MyConstitution campaign. After two terms, the Bar Council subsequently appointed him as Chairperson of the Constitutional Law Committee (2011-present). In 2011, he was also elected as a Committee member of the Kuala Lumpur Bar Committee, chairing the Information Technology and Communications Committee of the Kuala Lumpur Bar. He is also a member of the Bar Council's National Young Lawyers Committee and the KL Bar's Young Lawyers Committee. In 2012, Syahredzan was appointed as a member of the Bar Council.

Syahredzan has written articles published in the mainstream media, with columns in The Star (i-Pad) and Sinar Harian, as well as at www.loyarburok.com.

The LexisNexis Rule of Law Debate 2013 :

"This House Believes That the ASEAN Declaration of Human Rights Is An Ineffective Safeguard of Human Rights"

4.10PM

The format: British Parliamentary

In the British Parliamentary Debating format there are four teams in each round - two teams representing the Government, and two the Opposition, with each team consisting of two members. The Government supports the motion, and the Opposition opposes it.

On the whole, the debate is made up of:

1. Opening Government:
Prime Minister
Deputy Prime Minister
2. Opening Opposition:
Leader of the Opposition
Deputy Leader of the Opposition
3. Closing Government:
Member for the Government
Government Whip
4. Closing Opposition:
Member for the Opposition
Opposition Whip

Speaking alternates between the two sides and the order of the debate is therefore:

Prime Minister → Leader of the Opposition → Deputy Prime Minister → Deputy Leader of the Opposition → Member for the Government → Member for the Opposition → Government Whip → Opposition Whip.

Speeches are seven minutes in length; points of information can be requested after the first minute of a speech and prior to the last minute of the speech. The point of information can last no more than fifteen seconds and may take the form of a question, a statement, or an argument.

The British Parliamentary format is used for the World Universities Debating Championship and is probably the most commonly used format in the world.

The prize:

- USD2,000 cash; and
- USD3,000 worth of LexisNexis publications to the winning institution

The debaters:
